

The text in this leaflet is based on the first two of the Eight-Fold Path lectures given by Sandharakshita.

Books: Windhorse Publications | www.windhorsepublications.com

On-line Dharma talks: www.FreeBuddhist.Audio.com
Ask-A-Buddhist: one-minute video answers to all those tricky questions Buddhists get asked | www.clear-vision.org/Students/AskBuddhist.aspx

Online Dharma talks: www.WildMindDharma.org
On-line meditation: www.WildMindDharma.org

On-line Dharma talks: www.FreeBuddhist.Audio.com
Ask-A-Buddhist: one-minute video answers to all those tricky questions Buddhists get asked | www.clear-vision.org/Students/AskBuddhist.aspx

Resources

Some FWBO resources:
Main website: www/fwbo.org
Personal websites: FWBO People | www.myspace.com/fwbo
FWBO Photos | www.flickr.com/photos/fwbo/
Video clips: Video Sangha | www.youtube.com/user/fwbo
FWBO on Facebook:

www.facebook.com/FriendsoftheWesternBuddhistOrder

Young Buddhist groups: search Facebook for "Young FWBO"

Social media projects in India: The Karuna Trust | www.karunatrust.org

There are many ways to deepen the path of Buddhism: this leaflet presents its essentials of the well-known Noble Eightfold Path in a simple, no-part division: the Path of Vision and the Path of Transformation. Information on the Friends of the Western Buddhist Order (FWBO) is given on the back.

Buddhism is a path of practice and spiritual development leading to insight into the true nature of life. Buddhist practices are means of changing oneself in order to develop the qualities of awareness, kindness, and wisdom. The experience developed within the Buddhist tradition over thousands of years has created an incomparable resource for all those who wish to follow such a path - a path which ultimately culminates in Enlightenment or Buddhahood.

The basic tenets of Buddhist teaching are straightforward and practical: nothing is fixed or permanent; actions have consequences; change is possible. Thus Buddhism addresses itself to all people irrespective of race, nationality, or gender.

Buddhism teaches practical methods (such as meditation) which enable people to realise and utilise its teachings in order to transform their experience, to be fully responsible for their lives and to develop the qualities of Wisdom and Compassion.

Buddhism is a path of practice and spiritual development leading to insight into the true nature of life. Buddhist practices are means of changing oneself in order to develop the qualities of awareness, kindness, and wisdom. The experience developed within the Buddhist tradition over thousands of years has created an incomparable resource for all those who wish to follow such a path - a path which ultimately culminates in Enlightenment or Buddhahood.

Buddhism is a path of practice and spiritual development leading to insight into the true nature of life. Buddhist practices are means of changing oneself in order to develop the qualities of awareness, kindness, and wisdom. The experience developed within the Buddhist tradition over thousands of years has created an incomparable resource for all those who wish to follow such a path - a path which ultimately culminates in Enlightenment or Buddhahood.

Buddhism: a rough guide

The forms in which Buddhist truths are expressed always adapt according to circumstances. But the essence of Buddhism transcends culture and continuity.

Now that Buddhism has come to the West, Westerners are faced with the task of creating new and viable Buddhist traditions for the modern world. Over the last forty years the FWBO has grown to be one of the largest Buddhist movements in the West, with centres and activities in many cities around the world including India.

To Sandharakshita, the FWBO's founder, bringing Buddhism into an entirely new culture implied going back to basics — looking at the principles underlying all forms of Buddhism and working out how best to apply them in this new context. So the FWBO is based on the principle of 'critical ecumenicalism': aligned to no one traditional school, but drawing on the whole stream of Buddhist inspiration.

The FWBO has pioneered new structures that allow people to live out Buddhist teachings as an authentic Buddhist way of life in the 21st century: team-based right livelihood businesses, community projects such as the Karuna Trust, and more.

The text in this leaflet

The FWBO: Buddhism for the modern world

The positive aspect of transformation consists in cultivating the remainder of the Eightfold Path: Perfect Emotion, Speech, Action, Livelihood, Effort, Mindfulness, and Meditation. To take just the first, the positive aspect of Perfect Emotion consists in developing dana, maitri and karma: generosity, loving-kindness, and compassion. These are followed by mudita and upeksa: sympathetic joy and tranquillity, and finally strandha - faith and devotion.

The central problem of the spiritual life - for most people at least - is to find emotional equivalents for their intellectual understanding. This is illustrated in the well-known story of the great Indian teacher Bodhidharma meeting the Emperor of China.

The Emperor asked, 'What is the fundamental principle of Buddhism?' Bodhidharma answered 'Cease to do evil, learn to do good, purify the heart'. The Emperor was rather taken back, and said 'Is that all? Even a child of three can understand that!' And Bodhidharma replied: 'Yes your majesty: but even an old man of eighty cannot put it into practice!'

The Path of Vision: glimpsing the nature of existence

Buddhism begins with a vision of the nature of existence, the Truth or the Reality of things. This is the Path of Vision, darsana-marga in Sanskrit, the first step of the Buddha's Noble Eightfold Path.

Perfect Vision represents the phase of initial spiritual insight and experience. This may arise many different ways for different people: personal tragedy and loss; spontaneous mystical experience; by experience of nature or the arts; from deep thought; philosophical study; or meditation; as the result of altruistic activity or our whole experience of life; even in a dream. There is no uniform pattern. But however it arises, we should be very careful we do not lose or forget it: this so easily happens.

Buddhism itself has employed many means to communicate its vision of Truth: images such as the Wheel of Life and Six Realms, representations of the Buddha himself and later elaborations such as the Mandala of the Five Buddhas, also the very image of the Path itself. All these communicate in some way a vision of our actual present state of spiritual bondage, our future potential state of Enlightenment and the way leading from the one to the other.

Conceptually speaking, Perfect Vision is often explained in terms of experiencing the truth of Buddhist concepts such as the Three Lakshanas or Characteristics of Conditioned Existence; these teach that conditioned existence is 'marked', or short through, with dukkha, or unsatisfactoriness; anitya, or impermanence; and anatman, or the absence of any fixed selfhood. Other formulations include the Four Noble Truths, Karma and Rebirth, and the Four Sunyatas or Emptinesses.

Buddhist concepts may be compared to a map, whose study can lead us to a glimpse of the mountain itself: however the territory is described, it is important to remember Perfect Vision is a glimpse of Reality that is quite simple, direct, and immediate, and more of the nature of a spiritual experience than intellectual understanding.

As the Japanese Zenrin sings: Nothing whatever is hidden; From of old, all is clear as daylight...

After Vision comes Transformation: transformation of one's whole being in all its heights and depths, from top to bottom, in accordance with one's insight and experience.

The Path of Transformation: cease to do evil, learn to do good

The Path of Transformation is a complete, total, thoroughgoing transformation of one's emotional life, speech, communication with other people, relationships, livelihood and more. The Path of Transformation aims to enable us to bring the whole of our being on all levels up to the level of the highest moments of our lives. This is what it really means to follow the Buddha's Noble Eightfold Path.

Buddhism sees life as a process of constant change, and its practices aim to take advantage of this fact. It means that one can change for the better. The decisive factor in changing oneself is the mind, and Buddhism has developed many methods for working on the mind - most importantly, the practise of meditation. Meditation is a way of developing more positive states of mind that are characterised by calm, concentration, awareness, and kindness. Using the awareness developed in meditation it is possible to have a deep understanding of oneself, other people, and of life itself. One aspect of Transformation is a giving up of all that limits us or holds us back. This is the practice of renunciation or nekkhamma. This springs naturally from a decrease of craving within us, consequent upon our vision of the true nature of conditioned things. It manifests as stillness, simplicity, and contentment.

The positive aspect of transformation consists in cultivating the remainder of the Eightfold Path: Perfect Emotion, Speech, Action, Livelihood, Effort, Mindfulness, and Meditation. To take just the first, the positive aspect of Perfect Emotion consists in developing dana, maitri and karma: generosity, loving-kindness, and compassion. These are followed by mudita and upeksa: sympathetic joy and tranquillity, and finally strandha - faith and devotion.

The central problem of the spiritual life - for most people at least - is to find emotional equivalents for their intellectual understanding. This is illustrated in the well-known story of the great Indian teacher Bodhidharma meeting the Emperor of China.

The Emperor asked, 'What is the fundamental principle of Buddhism?' Bodhidharma answered 'Cease to do evil, learn to do good, purify the heart'. The Emperor was rather taken back, and said 'Is that all? Even a child of three can understand that!' And Bodhidharma replied: 'Yes your majesty: but even an old man of eighty cannot put it into practice!'