Why we charge

Many Buddhist places of worship are run by monks and nuns, supported financially by laypeople. This means they are able to rely on donations. For many years we too preferred to invite donations. Average donations were less than £1 per head, and costs mounted. Eventually we decided we would have to charge for guided group visits. There is no charge to visit individually.

In our tradition the ordained Buddhists are non-monastic, which means they have to earn a living. We pay school-visit-teachers who are not only practising Buddhists but educationally skilled. We aim to ensure a high standard of teaching and provide our teachers with a very modest, ethical income.

Where necessary, we are happy to agree a lower rate, in advance.

Group visits to Manchester Buddhist Centre

Manchester Buddhist Centre welcomes booked visits from educational and community groups of all ages. 1,500 students visit us each year, from primary and secondary schools, universities and colleges. We also welcome teacher-training groups and other community and faith groups.

A derelict Victorian warehouse beautifully converted by Buddhist volunteers, the Centre opened in 1996 and is at the heart of a thriving Buddhist community. It houses a resident community, as well as the very popular Bodywise Natural Health Centre and Earth Vegetarian Cafe. It's also home to the Clear Vision Trust, a charity making award-winning Buddhist teaching materials for the classroom and providing INSET for teachers.

Your visit

Our one-and-a-half-hour visits are tailored to your requirements. A typical visit would feature:

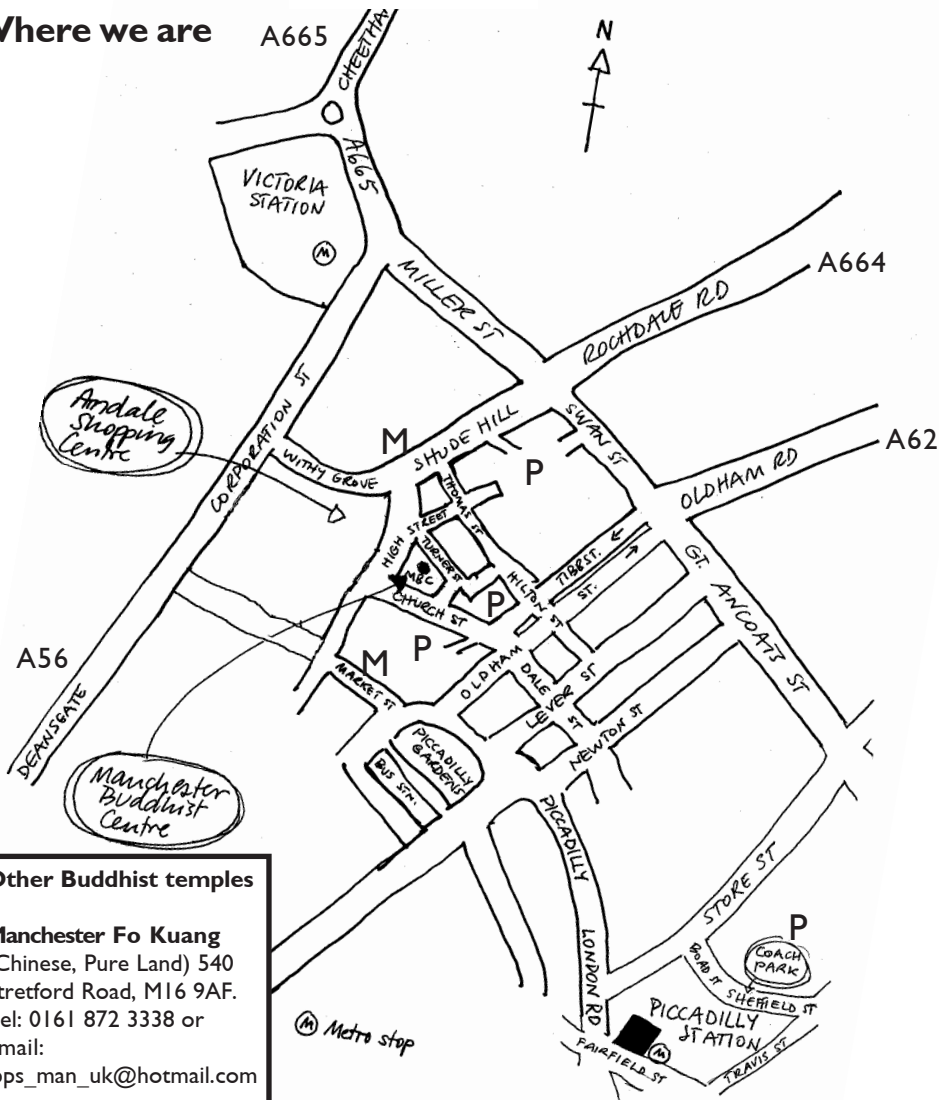

- an experienced Buddhist guide
- an introduction to the Centre and its activities
- in the shrine room, lively discussion of the Buddha's life and teachings
- guided meditation or "stilling" exercise (optional)
- preparation and follow-up worksheets for KS2&3
- a visit to our gift shop (optional)

Transport, one-way system & parking

Piccadilly and Victoria rail stations, Piccadilly Gardens bus station and Shude Hill or Market Street Metro stops (M) are within walking distance. Please note: traffic enters Turner Street from Shude Hill via Thomas Street and High Street; Turner Street is narrow and one-way. Cars and minibuses may park in the car parks on Shude Hill or Church Street; the coach park in Sheffield Street, behind Piccadilly Station, costs about £7 per day. Coach setting-down points are on Church Street and High Street.

Who we are

Manchester Buddhist Centre is run by the Friends of the Western Buddhist Order (FWBO), a worldwide movement founded by Sangharakshita, an English Buddhist. After 20 years as a monk in India he returned to Britain in 1967 and set up the FWBO. Among the many forms of Buddhism practised in Britain today, the FWBO is characterised by its attempt to develop a modern Western expression of the Buddha’s teachings.

The Clear Vision Trust (email: education@clear-vision.org) is a charity associated with the FWBO. It runs the school visits service for the MBC, makes DVD packs on Buddhism for KS1-5 and supplies books, posters, artefacts and INSET to support teaching of Buddhism up to A Level. Pathways (07958 119406) offers in-school drama workshops and assemblies on Buddhist themes.

Photographs

You are welcome to take photographs.

Dress

There are no clothing restrictions, but we invite you to remove your shoes to enter the shrine room.

Refreshments

We regret we do not have space for large groups to eat sandwiches. (However, the Chinese Buddhist Centre has a lunch-room. See opposite.) Groups of up to about 20 may use Earth cafe. Please warn them! 0161 834 1996.

Special needs

We welcome visitors with special needs of any kind.

There is a disabled-accessible toilet on the ground floor and internal lift access to all floors.

However, pending funding, there is no alternative to the six steps up to the front door, with handrails both sides.

Both shrine rooms are equipped with loop systems for hearing-aid-users. In the Sense UK Awards 2005 the MBC was commended for its services to the deafblind community.

Disabled parking: there are spaces in Turner Street and in Brick Street, both facing the MBC front door.

“The Centre made a deep impression on the students - as I knew it would. I suspect the ripples will continue into their adult lives.”
